The Mission of Louisville Grows is to promote the wellbeing of our local communities by fostering sustainable living and community partnerships through education, leadership, and the coordination of resources.

History

Louisville Grows is locally grown non-profit that is committed to providing sustainability consultation of the highest quality. We are a group of motivated and energetic citizens with a passion for the Louisville Metro area, and are focused to gain the greatest value for our clients. We are currently in the process of applying for our 501(c)3 status with the help the Kentucky Resource Council as our financial umbrella, and have 5 board members that all function as employees of this non-profit.

Mason Roberts - Executive Director
Devin Freel - Communications Director
Stephanie Wafzig - Education Director
Guillermo Quintana - Economic Development Director
Paige Battcher - Volunteer Director

Services

We believe that sustainability should be available to all through professional analysis, effective communication and neighborly values. This is why we chose to structure our business as a non-profit. In this way organizations that can afford to pay for our services, along with various donors, subsidize members of the community who cannot. Services may come at varying costs.

- Urban Agriculture - Louisville Grows provides a holding-house for community garden resources including but not limited to: raw material donations, intellectual property, volunteer coordination, and site development. This allows us to foster full-scale projects at any point of their operation or need level.
- Carbon Analysis and Offsetting - Louisville Grows understands the full impact of organizations and their products on the environment. With this expertise we offer base line carbon data and complete life cycle analysis of your operations combined with the ability to source various options for offsetting these effects in a cost efficient and timely manner.
- Efficiency Programs - Louisville Grows offers the creation and implementation of waste management and energy efficiency programs. Not only is waste harmful to the environment and the community at large, it is harmful to your organization's bottom line. We first analyze your operations to determine the program of best fit then choose between energy/operational efficiency, recycling, and/or composting.
- Sustainable Economic Development - Louisville Grows brings our resources together to work for government and neighborhood associations to advise on best practices of economic development and environmental remediation. This includes business attraction, zero-waste industry clustering, community planning, and land acquisition strategies.
